CHICAGO PROFESSOR FINDS MANY CURIOUS THINGS.

Namerous-He is Finding All He Can But Refuses to Tell What His Scheme Is -It is Believed He is Seeking to Prov That at One Time the Human Being Had More Than the Present Number of Digits-What He Has Discovered Among the Hexadactylous of America

Chicago, Aug. 30.—Hexadactylous specimens of the human family are pouring in on Professor Starr at the Chicago University with much rapidity. They are coming so fast, in fact, that the anthropologist fears he will have to employ a curator to keep track of them if the rush continues. Up to yesterday fifty one cases had been reported.

Wisconsin seems to be prolific of sixfingered folks. The first case brought to Professor Starr's notice was from Milwaukee, and was in the professors company seven hours after reading the advertisement in the Times-Herald. The next mail brought notice of more in the same state. The Hexadactylous field in Wisconsin promises a rich yield. Nexter home the total is footing up rapidly, too. Hyde Park has resolved itself into a colony of exporers for Professor Starr's benefit. Cases, dead and alive, have been reported to the scientist The majority have been those of children, and most of these have had the extra digits removed by surgical proceas. From the rest of the city letters have come in by the dozens, some from hexadactylous cases themselves, others from parents of children who were born with an over supply of fingers or toes. The majority, however, have been from physicians interested in the cases from the medical standpoint. They have generally added a postscript that the writers stand ready to aid the professor in his enterprise for the sake of science.

All the cases reported have complied strictly with all the specifications. They He had rather hoped that of the former the limit at eleven fingers or toes, as the The result of the parliamentary elec- case might be, and he fully expects to hear from some such cases yet, and Professor Starr does not see why America in Socialist and Republican, whose pre- should be behind Germany. But not all of the roads around Boston are like those within the city. Some are better and some are worse, to be sure, but the riding down here as a whole is pleasant when you get used to the electric cars that whiz and buzz along almost every road and make you feel as if they were going to crawl up your spine when behind, or jump the track and mash your life out when they are ahead. The environs of Boston have the curse of the electric car in its worst form.

FINE RIDE UP THE COAST. In spite of all the drawbacks, though, a party of Chicago riders managed toa pick out a pleasant day's rid ing but a few days back, and to wheel themselves into regions that are interesting and famous in the early history of the country. It was but a random ride for a day, but it led into lots of places that are mentioned in theh istory books, and to others along the Atlantic that are famous as fashionable summer resorts, where just now Chicagoans by the thousands and more are enjoying their summer outings in coaching parties, tennis and wheeling and plunging in the sea. In a word, the trip led from Loston out through Cambridge and Har-vard college, Arlington, Medford, where Tuft's college is situated, the Middlesex woods, Malden, Lynn, Swampscott, Marblehead, Manchester-by-the-Sea, Beverly Farms, Magnolia and on to Gloucester.
